Hi everyone,

I often say how lucky I am to do a job I truly love — spending my days with my wonderful family, brilliant team, and of course the most affectionate, entertaining company anyone could ask for… the cats and all small animals.

I'm also incredibly grateful for the loyal, kind customers who have supported me over the years. For the last 16 years I've worked almost every single day, juggling the physical side of the job with the paperwork, bookings, tax changes, maintenance and everything else that comes with running a cattery. Even on holidays, the phone never really stops. As much as I adore what I do, I've reached a point where I need to prioritise my mental and physical health and spend more time with my family.

After a lot of thought, I've made the difficult decision to permanently reduce my opening hours and make a few necessary changes.

Price changes (cats) from April 1st 2026:

- £14 per day - boarding fees
- £4 per day - heating - as and when required

Changes to opening hours from May 1st 2026:

- Monday–Friday: 8:30–11
- Saturday: 8:30–11 and 2–4
- Switching from a daily rate to a nightly rate (excluding Saturdays)

I never like increasing prices, but like many small businesses we're feeling the impact of rising costs.

Turning 60 last year has made me reflect on how much my body and mind have changed since I first started. I'm incredibly fortunate to have the support of my family and staff, and these adjustments will help me continue doing the job I love — just in a more sustainable way.

Thank you, as always, for your understanding and continued support. It means the world.
